Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Pat. App. Pub. No. 2002/0019844 (Kurowski et al.).

As per claim 1, Kurowski et al. discloses:

requesting a computer in a network to install a first application and execute the first application (see, e.g., paragraph [0061] (client receives a task from the task server));

transferring one or more files to the computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0092] (application modules are downloaded));

making modifications to the computer to install and execute the first application on the computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0156]) while recording the modifications (see, e.g., paragraph [0259] (settings and state are stored in files)), the modifications comprising allocating a resource to the first application (see, e.g., paragraph [0156] (a part of the memory is allocated to the application));

halting the first application on the computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0147]); reversing a portion of the modifications to the computer according to the recorded modifications, reversing comprises deallocating the resource from the first application (see, e.g., paragraph [0157]); and making modifications to the computer to install and execute a second application on the available computer while recording the modifications, the modifications comprise allocating the resource to the second application (see, e.g., paragraph [0158]).

As per claim 2, Kurowski et al. further discloses the modifications comprising setting a communications port or saving the one or more files to a data storage device accessible to the computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0156] (saving the files making up the application to the local hard disk of the client computer)).

As per claim 3, Kurowski et al. further discloses the first application having a type and if at least one other application running on the computer has a type that is identical to the second application's type, the portion does not comprise modifications required to install and execute applications having the type (see, e.g., paragraphs [0154] and [0158] (a locally cached version of the computation module is used if available)).

As per claim 4, Kurowski et al. discloses a network comprising:

a first computer configured to execute a first application manager that manages a first application (see, e.g., paragraph [0061] (client receives a task from the task server)); and a second computer configured to execute a service (see, e.g., paragraph [0061] (client receives a task from the task server); paragraph [0092] (application modules are downloaded)), wherein the service, upon request from the first application manager, installs and executes a first application by making modifications to the second computer to install and execute the first application on the second computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0156]) while recording the modifications (see, e.g., paragraph [0259] (settings and state are stored in files)), the modifications comprise allocating a resource to the first application manager (see, e.g., paragraph [0156] (a part of the memory is allocated to the application)).

As per claim 5, Kurowski et al. further discloses the service, upon request from the first application manager, being configured to execute the following:

halts the first application on the second computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0147]); reverses a portion of the modifications to the second computer according to the recorded modifications, reversing comprises deallocating the resource from the first application manager (see, e.g., paragraph [0157]); and makes modifications to the second computer to install and execute a second application on the second computer while recording the modifications, the modifications comprise allocating the resource to a second application manager (see, e.g., paragraph [0158]).

As per claim 6, Kurowski et al. further discloses the modifications comprising setting a communications port or saving the one or more files to a data storage device accessible to the second computer (see, e.g., paragraph [0156] (saving the files making up the application to the local hard disk of the client computer)).

As per claim 7, Kurowski et al. further discloses the first application having a type and if at least one other application running on the second computer has a type that is identical to the second application's type, the portion does not comprise modifications required to install and execute applications having the type (see, e.g., paragraphs [0154] and [0158] (a locally cached version of the computation module is used if available)).
